

Changing Behavior in High Stakes

'Changing Behavior in High Stakes' is an intermediate level course working deeply with identity and story.

It is the second stage of an incremental program known as 'Becoming an Interventionist'. The programs we have developed are designed in the belief that only those organizations and leaders prepared to reach into the past to explore their stories and identity can be truly capable of effectively meeting the demands of the future.

'Changing Behavior in High Stakes' is suitable for practitioners, coaches and facilitators who have successfully completed the stage 1 entry level program - 'Making Change Happen'.

By participating in this program you will...

- Work with Dr David Kantor's concepts of the heroic leader in crisis and know how to intervene when toxic themes begin to escalate, moral judgment abounds and clashes seem impossible to deal with
- Use the Kantor Institute's High Stakes Behavioral Profile to understand and work with leader behavior in critical, high stakes situations when shadow behaviors show themselves and begin to wreak havoc
- Design and lead interventions that employ story to work on purpose and identity
- Teach all elements of Structural Dynamics for changing behavior in high stakes
